the above-mentioned results of sharp decline in input (i.e. labor) intensity. One of the assumptions that characterizes many of the the labor market models are that the demand for labor is not too elastic. In the context of the labor market, the above-mentioned results are in line with the above-mentioned assumptions.

Many have been told that they are "too old" or "too young" to start a new career. But it's never too late to make a change. In fact, many people find that their later years are the best time to pursue a passion or a new challenge. The key is to take action now, before it's too late.
